This European Crohn's and Colitis Organisation consensus guideline addresses surgical management of medically refractory ulcerative colitis in adults, covering surgical approaches, perioperative optimisation, techniques, and centre expertise recommendations.

KEY POINTS

- The guideline is the second of two ECCO evidence-based consensus documents on ulcerative colitis management in adults; the first covered medical management including acute severe colitis.
- Topics addressed include general surgical approach and perioperative optimisation for medically refractory ulcerative colitis.
- The guideline covers surgical strategies and techniques, and provides recommendations on levels of centre expertise and surgical specialisation.
- The guidelines aim to inform shared decision-making and guide clinicians and healthcare professionals caring for patients with ulcerative colitis.
